

Jaden's Story

STONEWATER®

ADOLESCENT

RECOVERY CENTER

Actual Parents of a Stonewater Alumnus: When the drug abuse started, he started pushing us away: no eye contact, hiding, running, disappearing for days. There really wasn't a relationship anymore. It stopped. He pushed everybody away. We had all the warning signs that something was going on. It was a much deeper issue that we had no idea about. We found him passed out in the backseat of a car, pretty much overdosed. We wanted him to be in a safe environment, in a facility that was home-like, had a home-like structure, but also had Christian values. He's a part of something, and I think that's very important about this treatment. They're not, they don't get pushed to the side. They gotta interact and be part of everything. It starts in the morning. From getting up, making your bed ... He's loving again. Jaden is back. The sweet Jaden that we knew is back. He has drive to accomplish something and I think it's very important. It's not a dead end street anymore. He's got a lot of people behind him, that love him, and he got brought here, because people care about him and love him, not to push him away. Thank you. Thank you. And we love you, guys. You'll always be in our hearts.
